COMMUNICATING STUDENT PROGRESS

Keys to Success:

The progress report is one form of communication between school and home. Each child will have a very different profile which reflects his or her uniqueness. All children will not show the same progress in each category. Developmental learning is affected by the age and maturity level of the child, his or her out of school experiences, as well as classroom learning. At the second through fifth grades it is a collaborative evaluation in that the student's self-reflection is a key component along with the teacher's narrative profile.

Children in the Morris School District progress along continuums in a child-centered, developmentally appropriate, non-comparative, non-competitive environment. This individualized progress report indicates your child's place along the reading and writing continuums, as well as his/her achievement in developing math knowledge, skills and concepts. The school community promotes academic excellence by empowering children to set and achieve high standards, develop problem solving skills, be self-reflective, make responsible decisions and become life long learners. Parents/guardians are encouraged to be education partners by responding in writing to your child's progress report.

Learning Continuum:

Children may exhibit characteristics from more than one stage on the continuum. Your child exhibits a majority of the characteristics in the area(s) checked on the reverse side of this page. The level to which the child exhibits these characteristics is noted by the use of a key:

I- Independently uses skill P- Progressing and developing E- Experiencing difficulty

STUDENT NAME: _____

REPORT CARD COMMENTS

Narrative based on positive growth seen this year (Reading, Writing, Math, Social and Emotional) _____ is a delight to have in class. He is very hard working, motivated and dedicated to his learning. _____ enters the classroom each day with a willingness to learn. He is beginning to open up to the class and me a bit more as I feel he has gained more self-confidence. _____ gets along well with others and is always willing to lend a hand to a friend or teacher in need.

In reading, _____ is making fine progress as he is recognizing more sight words and beginning to read with more fluency. He is also starting to comprehend what is taking place in the story. As _____ approaches a tricky word, he uses strategies to determine which word would make sense.

In writing, _____ is beginning to express his ideas clearly. He is independently attempting to use resources to assist with spelling. _____ is also learning to reread what he has written to make sure that the words make sense.

GOALS (Drawn specifically from the continuum and other report card aspects)

Reading:

- *Story comprehension-after reading at home, please ask _____ to summarize what took place in the story with some supporting details.
- *Practice reading nonfiction books and reviewing the parts of a nonfiction book.

Writing:

- *Reread for language, grammar and sentence structure.
- *Begin sentences with capital letters and end with punctuation.

Math:

- *Practice telling time to the half hour
- *Identify coins and each coin's value

BASIC SKILLS PROGRESS REPORT

February 2011

We continue to provide additional instruction to your child, [REDACTED] in Language Arts through the BSI program.

Strengths:

- Using patterns while reading
- Recognizing basic sight words (a, the, I, like)
- Reads familiar books with fluency and expression
- Uses 1 to 1 correspondence (pointing with finger and tracking with his eyes)
- Reads "just right" texts with and without patterns
- At point of difficulty uses multiple strategies: puts beginning sound on lips, uses picture clues, uses context, looks back in text for word

Goals:

- Continue to build sight word vocabulary, as well as general English vocabulary
- Work on "stretching out" (or sounding out) simple 1 and 2 syllable words
- Build higher level comprehension skills (making connections, giving opinions, inferring, etc.)

Comments:

[REDACTED] has made significant improvement in reading and writing. He is now able to read books with and without the support of a pattern. When [REDACTED] gets "stuck," he initiates multiple problem solving techniques. He has increased his high frequency sight word vocabulary from 4 words to 29 words. When reading a familiar text, [REDACTED] reads fluently and expressively, demonstrating meaning and understanding.

Sincerely,

Basic Skills Instructor

BASIC SKILLS PROGRESS REPORT

February 2011

We continue to provide additional instruction to your child, [REDACTED] in mathematics through the BSI program.

Strengths:

- telling time to the hour
- Skip counting by 10's
- Counting base-10 blocks (place value)
- Adding and subtracting with a number grid and/or number line
- Measuring length in centimeters and inches

Goals:

- Solving simple number stories (knowing when to add and when to subtract)
- Identifying coins and their value, counting mixed sets of coins, and identifying coins need to buy an item
- Writing time in the proper format (_: _), telling time to the half hour

Comments:

[REDACTED] is making good progress in math. He seems to learn new concepts with relative ease.

Sincerely,

[REDACTED]
